Cristobalite Powder

Discover the celestial touch of antropic quartz powder made up of a chemical reaction fo Oxygen and Silicon. It's mineral powder form popularly known as Christobalite.

What is Universal Quartz Made of?

Christobalite SiO_2

Christobalite is a high-performance silica polymorph that serves as a key component in our premium quartz surfaces. This synthetic mineral enhances the structural integrity and aesthetic appeal of our slabs through its unique crystal formation. Unlike standard quartz, Christobalite offers superior thermal stability and enhanced workability during manufacturing. Its incorporation into our formulation results in stronger, more durable surfaces that maintain their beauty over time.

Why Christobalite?

Features of Christobalite:

- Gloss & Brightness: Delivers exceptional high-gloss finish while enhancing the natural brightness and whiteness of quartz surfaces.
- Surface Smoothness: Significantly improves polishability, creating ultra-smooth surfaces with superior tactile quality.
- UV Stability: Provides outstanding resistance to yellowing and color degradation under intense sunlight and bright lighting conditions.
- Workability: Enhances manufacturing efficiency with improved workability while reducing resin requirements in formulations.

Flawless & Functional

Stain & Scratch Resistance

Our surfaces boast advanced stain and scratch-resistant technology, guaranteeing a flawless finish in any environment while providing a sleek, contemporary appearance.

Safe with food contact

Our premium surfaces are crafted to meet the highest standards of safety and hygiene, ensuring they are completely safe for direct food contact. Durable and easy to clean, they are perfect for kitchens, whether you're preparing meals, serving dishes, or showcasing culinary creations. Ideal for both home cooks and professionals, these surfaces offer a seamless blend of practicality, elegance, and safety.

Homogeneous surface

Universal Quartz focuses on crafting homogenous, high-quality quartz slabs that blend timeless elegance with modern durability. Each slab showcases consistent patterns and textures, ensuring a cohesive and premium aesthetic for interiors. Universal Quartz emphasizes reliability, sustainability, and innovative design, making its slabs a trusted choice for kitchen countertops, bathroom surfaces, and beyond.

Impervious to heat

Universal Quartz offers engineered quartz slabs that are popular for their durability, aesthetic appeal, and low maintenance. These slabs are heat-resistant to a certain extent; however, they are not impervious to heat. The resin binders used in quartz products can melt or warp when exposed to extreme heat. Therefore, it's crucial to avoid placing hot items like pots and pans directly onto quartz surfaces, as this can cause permanent damage.

Strong & Durable

Universal Quartz offers strong and durable quartz slabs designed for both residential and commercial applications. These slabs are engineered from natural quartz crystals combined with resins and pigments, resulting in a non-porous, scratch-resistant, and stain-resistant surface. Their durability makes them ideal for high-traffic areas like kitchen countertops, bathroom vanities, and flooring. Universal Quartz slabs are also available in various colors, patterns, and finishes, providing both functionality and aesthetic versatility. Their low-maintenance nature and resistance to heat and wear make them a long-lasting choice for modern interiors.

What about environmental issues?

1. Environmental Commitment

India is also known for its design and quality, as well as strict safety and manufacturing standards. Universal Quartz embodies this with eco-friendly product creation in a sustainable manufacturing environment that also prioritises employee safety and the welfare of the planet. Since quartz is one of the most abundant natural resources on Earth, Universal Quartz products are NSF 51 food zone certified, GREENGUARD Gold Certified® for low emissions, and KOSHER certified. See the "Safety, Environment & Sustainability" section for more information.

2. Universal Quartz vs. Granite

Unlike natural stone, granite cut from blocks, Universal Quartz is an engineered slab, and it is mostly composed of natural quartz minerals. This process in manufacturing enables Universal Quartz to have a 10-year transferable warranty and also a non-porous surface which does not need sealing and makes it easy for maintenance.

3. Metropolis Finish

The Metropolis finish is one of a kind, with the texture of a concretized look mimicked through an aesthetic quality of dips, ridges, and indentations, as no two installations are alike. For an accurate impression, we highly recommend seeing a full slab before confirming your order; you will be mesmerized by its one-of-a-kind beauty.

4. Surface Finishes

Polished finishes offer a glossy, maintenance-free surface that is resistant to dirt and retains brilliance. Specialty finishes such as honed, antique, brushed, and Metropolis provide a unique aesthetic but may require more care because fingerprints and marks show up much easier. These can easily be cleaned with nonabrasive products like Soft Scrub® gel and a microfiber cloth.

5. Color and Pattern Consistency

Universal Quartz unites natural elements with technology for an unparalleled surface. More uniform than natural stone, some colour variation, pattern variation, and size variation of the aggregate may be apparent, making it even more naturally beautiful. This subtle distinction is why designers and large projects are drawn to Universal Quartz for its aesthetic uniformity.

6. Warranty Coverage

Universal Quartz features a 10-year limited transferable warranty against manufacturing defects. The warranty covers material failure during the duration of the term but excludes the cost of labour, physical damage, misuse, or failure in extreme conditions. Universal Quartz will replace or repair materials that fail due to qualifying events.

7. Seams and Lamination Lines

Universal Quartz comes in two and three-centimeter thicknesses, and thicker edges can be obtained by lamination. Although colour-coordinated glue is used to connect the seams, they are still visible and may differ slightly. Although a well-fitted seam will be aligned and smooth, requests for fewer seams may necessitate the use of more slabs, which raises the cost.

8. Care for Dark Colors

Any darker shade in surface material, including Universal Quartz, requires more maintenance because darker colours show fingerprints, dirt, and watermarks much more readily than lighter shades. Cleaning is one way to maintain their appearance.

9. Care and Maintenance

Universal Quartz surfaces are low maintenance but need simple care to retain their beauty. For more details, please see the "Care & Maintenance" section and download our recommendations.

10. Heat Resistance

Universal Quartz can tolerate temperatures of up to 375°F for short periods without sustaining any damage. Still, to preserve the surface, it is highly recommended that hot items, such as skillets or crockpots, be set directly on the countertop using hot pads or trivets.

11. Stain Resistance

Universal Quartz is a non-porous surface that resists staining and never requires sealing. It is made of 93% natural quartz and 7% polymer resin binders for long-lasting durability and easy maintenance.

12. Technical Excellence

Advanced engineering in Universal Quartz combines natural quartz minerals with polymer resins and pigments to make the material. The technical specifications include high flexural strength, scratch resistance, and resistance to thermal shock, ensuring reliability in a wide range of applications.

13. Sustainability Practices

Universal Quartz comprises 90-93% natural quartz, incorporated with advanced resins and lacquers for durability and refinement.
